Explore MED is a two-week residential program of classroom and experiential learning to help students investigate what it means to be "premed".

The program is best geared for undergraduate sophomores and juniors, but it’s beneficial for anyone contemplating a career in healthcare. The program also benefits those applying to graduate programs and seek highly personalized advising and support.

Participants spend time in clinical rotations in pulmonary, endocrinology, internal medicine, orthopedics, and podiatry.

Visits to local programs in medicine, dentistry, optometry, podiatry, PA, occupational therapy, pharmacy, veterinary medicine, and nursing.

Workshops focus on personal statement writing, interview preparation, requesting letters of evaluation, and the future of health care.

Tuition fee is $2,200. This cost includes housing, weekday meals, and transportation to and from clinical sites. Tuition for commuting students without room and board is $1,700.

Application requirements include a personal statement, one letter of recommendation, and unofficial transcripts.
